What You Need To Know

How to prepare for your test:

Drink 32 ounces of clear liquids 1 hour prior to your exam. Do not urinate until after the exam.

How long will the test take?

About 1 hour.

What is the purpose of the test?

To show images of the female pelvic organs during pregnancy and to acquire measurements for determining fetal growth and anatomy.

This test is done from the 16th week of pregnancy until childbirth. [For a description of the ultrasound test done before the 16th week, see separate sheet called "Early OB (Pregnancy)."]

How is the test performed?

A doctor or sonographer will place a transducer (a small, handheld probe) on the surface of your lower abdomen. A small amount of gel will be used on the skin to ensure good transducer contact. The transducer will be moved over the surface of the abdomen to create pictures of your pelvic organs and your baby (fetus).

Required before test:

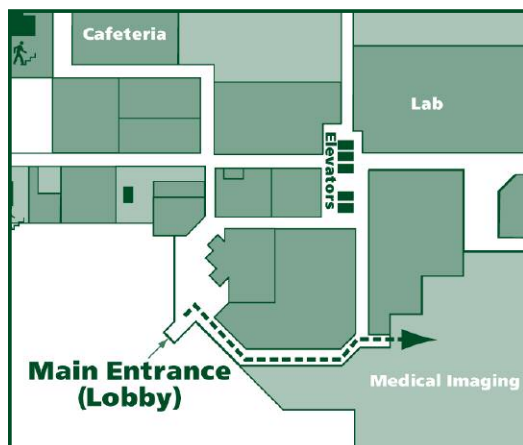

Please provide a signed physician order to perform the exam.

Results will be sent to your ordering physician after a radiologist's review.
